

RESCHEDULED

Cognizant Autonomous Systems for Safety Critical Applications (CASSCA) Conference

Now 16 / 17 September 2019

Hyatt Regency Miami

Miami, Florida

(NOTE new venue)

Due to the extended impasse between US Congressional leaders and the White House that has created a partial US government shutdown, it is with regret that the (US) Institute of Navigation (ION) has decided to postpone the Cognizant Autonomous Systems for Safety Critical Applications (CASSCA) Conference, scheduled to take place on 28 / 29 January 2019 at the Hyatt Regency Reston in Reston, Virginia.

ION regrets having to take this step it is reported. This shutdown has impacted CASSCA speakers and attendees and brought uncertainty about the number of government officials working in autonomous systems who are currently furloughed, making this decision inevitable.

The CASSCA Conference has been rescheduled to be held on 16 / 17 September 2019 in Miami, Florida in parallel with ION GNSS+ 2019.

ION is committed to this strong and dynamic technical program and is confident this venue will provide maximum exposure and networking opportunities for the highly esteemed invited speakers and conference attendees.

For a revised programme readers are invited to see:

www.ion.org/cassca/program.cfm